Formal Structure and Analysis

講師：何司能教授 (Professor Edward Ho) DMus, MMus, BMus, B.A, LRSM, FTCL, LMusTCL, LTCL

課程內容：

FORMAL STRUCTURE AND ANALYSIS

This seminar will study musical forms and structures in the Renaissance, Baroque, Classical and Romantic periods and 20th century. These include binary, rounded binary, ternary, da capo aria, secco and accompanied recitatives, ritornello, ground bass, chaconne, passacaglia, fugue (including double and triple fugues), sonata, minuet-trio, scherzo, simple rondo, sonata rondo, variations, arch, strophic, through-composed, cyclic, open and variable forms. The seminar will also discuss how to identify modulations and explain the connection between modulation and form. Examples will be taken from works (not only piano works) across different historical periods for analysis. Some of the often-asked questions as listed below will be addressed.

- What is the difference between polyphony and counterpoint?
- What is the difference between sequence and imitation?
- What is the difference between imitation and canon?
- What is the difference between counterpoint and counter-subject?
- What is the difference between tonal and real answer in a fugue?
- How can you tell when accidentals do not indicate a modulation?
- How do you identify the start of transition in the exposition of a sonata-form movement?
- How do you identify the second subject?
- How do you determine the beginning of a closing section or coda?
- How do you analyse the techniques of variation writing?

Details of works for study will be available later.
